Editorial policy

From PropFirmLicenseWiki, the free encyclopedia of prop firm licensing · Last updated 28 November 2026

PropFirmLicenseWiki is an independent reference. Prop trading is a field full of affiliate marketing and “regulated” claims, so this policy is stricter than usual. It explains where our facts come from, how we keep them current, and how we keep commercial interests out of the articles.

Sources

- Official sources first. Laws, capital requirements and regulators' positions come from the regulator, the law, a court or another public body wherever one is available. These references are marked Official.
- Named trade press only where needed. Several regulators have commented on prop firms only in interviews with the trade press. We use those reports, name the publication, and mark the point as “reported”.
- We say what we could not confirm. “Not confirmed” means exactly that; it does not mean the rule does not exist.
- Where sources conflict, the official source wins and the article notes the conflict.

Neutrality

- No prop firm rankings, reviews, affiliate links or discount codes. Articles name firms only where a regulator, a court or a firm's own announcement makes them part of the story.
- No prop firm or broker advertising on jurisdiction guides or comparison pages.
- We report enforcement actions and their outcomes in full, including cases a regulator lost.
- We describe every jurisdiction in the same format and the same tone.

Conflicts of interest

The operator offers paid private consultations on setting up and licensing prop trading businesses. Consultation services are never mentioned inside jurisdiction guides, and no jurisdiction is described more favourably because of client demand.

Dates and updates

- Every article shows a Last updated date and an “as of” date for its facts.
- Guides are reviewed at least twice a year, and promptly when a regulator publishes a position or acts against a prop firm.

Corrections

Anyone can use Suggest an edit. Corrections must cite a source, preferably the regulator's own website. Editors check every suggestion against its source before changing an article.

Not advice

Articles are general information, not legal, financial or investment advice. See the disclaimer.
